EULA VAN VRANKEN

27 Apr 1902 Tabor Beacon, Tabor, IA

Miss Eula Van Vranken, a former well-known Tabor girl. Has been assigned work by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and will sail from San Francis about the middle of August for Laos, her first field of labor. Prior to sailing she will visit New York for final instructions and hopes to spend a short time with IA friends on the return trip to the coast. Her home is at Milton, Oregon, where she has been teaching the past year, and where her parents have resided for some time.

29 Jun 1906 Fremont County Herald, Sidney IA

Tabor: Miss Eula Van Vranken arrived Monday noon, leaving Wednesday morning. She is under the appointment to go as a missionary to Siam, under Presbyterian auspices, and will sail about the middle of August in company with eight others who go to various points in Siam. She is just returning from New York where she conferred with the board, receiving instructions, etc.

HeRD #108 - Historical Situations & Missions

The longer we delve into the lives and records of the "old-time" missionaries, the more we appreciate the complexity of their lives. They lived in a world as full, as detailed, as rich as our own. And like us, they had their perception of their own historical situation in northern Thailand. Eula Van Vranken, writing in the January 1907 issue of the LAOS NEWS opens a small window on that perception. She wrote that the northern Thai, "...had been characterized to me as a 'loving, childlike teachable people,' and so they seem. They are childish and childlike: the trait is very marked in their Christian faith and zeal. One feels that they must be in the very childhood of civilization with possibilities before them. This impression grows when I learn that for generations they have lived in political bondage to a conquering nation, many in abject slavery, while at the same time there has been a worse bondage to ignorance and superstition." (p. 18) From our perspective, these words seem naive. Northern Thai culture was in nowise in the "childhood of civilization." Chiang Mai, one-time capital of the Lan Na Kingdom, was founded more than 400 years before the American colonies. That kingdom reached several peaks of high culture from the 14th through the 16th centuries. Van Vranken was writing, however, at a time when the Lan Na Kingdom's rich history was still little known and the devastation of 200 years of chaotic Burmese rule in the 17th and 18th centuries was still well-remembered. In 1907, northern Thai culture was but a shadow of its former greatness, and the penetration of central Thai political, economic, social, and cultural domination was increasing rapidly. It wasn't difficult for Van Vranken and her colleagues to feel an unconscious paternalism about the northern Thai. They perceived only the tragedy and none of the triumph of Lan Na history. From the perspective of church history, the missionaries' interpretation of northern Thai history is important. The missionaries viewed the church, in its social and historical context, as both childish and child-like. And they treated it accordingly. The lesson: how we understand the past matters---it matters a great deal.
