Generation No. 1

1. PIERRE CHRYSOLOGUE² PAMBRUN (*ANDRE DOMINIQUE*¹) was born 17 Dec 1793 in Vandreuil, L'Islet, Quebec, Lower Canada, and died 15 May 1841 in six miles up the Walla Walla River from Fort Nez. He married (1) NATIVE1ST W/O P. PAMBRUN. He married (2) NATIVE 2ND W/O P. PAMBRUN. He married (3) CATHERINE HORTENSE HUMPHERVILLE 08 Dec 1838 in Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River¹, daughter of THOMAS HUMPHERVILLE and ANNE'METISSE'. She was born 1805 in York Factory on Hudson Bay, and died 1886 in West Chehalem, OR.

Bonneville and his two companions were kindly received at Fort Walla Walla by Mr. P.C. Pambrun, who, with five or six men, was in charge of that station at the mouth of the Walla Walla River. This Hudson's Bay Company's representative was a courteous, affable host, but when asked to sell the Captain supplies that would enable his return to the Rocky Mountains, said: "That worthy superintendent, who has extended all the genial rights of hospitality, now suddenly assumed a withered-up aspect and demeanor, and observed that, however he might feel disposed to serve him personally, he felt bound by his duty to the Hudson's Bay Company to do nothing which should facilitate or encourage the visits of other traders among the Indians in that part of the country." Bonneville remained at the fort but two days longer, for his destitute condition, combined with the lateness in the season, rendered it necessary for him to return immediately; and he started on the back trail with his Nez Perce guide, and finally reached the point of general rendezvous for his various expeditions. This is a true statement of the position assumed by the Hudson's Bay Company; its agents would not themselves, nor would they permit the Indians under their control to deal with or in any manner assist opposition traders; but that Bonneville traversed the country in safety with but three companions, after the company was aware of his intention to return and found a rival establishment on the Columbia, is convincing evidence that assassination was not one of its methods of overcoming competition, however much such charges may be reiterated by its enemies.

Pioneer days of Oregon history, page 595

A kindly greeting awaited these wayfarers when they reached Fort Walla Walla. Pambrun was in charge, and of all the chiefs of the Hudson's Bay Co., he was one of the kindest. A Catholic himself, the only one of all the fur traders, too, who had taken pains to teach the native the great truths of the Christian religion, he received these missionaries of a different faith with all sympathy and kindness, and remained their friend and supporter for the few remaining years of his life; he died at Walla Walla not long after. Mrs. Spaulding wrote to her friends that he received her in his arms when she rode up, as if he had been her own father. They were entertained with the best the country could furnish and Pambrun accompanied them to Vancouver.

The Mantle of Elias : the story of Fathers Blanchet and Demers in early Oregon, page 75 and 76

Mr. Pambrun¹, a French gentleman, had lived for many years on the frontier where he had become a part of the Northwest and his post on the Columbia was a favorite stopping place for the brigades passing up and down the river or to the interior.

Mrs. Pambrun was not at the fort for she and some of the children were in Vancouver where Pierre had planned to visit them during the Christmas Season. Delighted that he might have the opportunity of hearing the services of his church, this one-time member of the Canadian Voltigeurs, made the missionaries welcome and when they had finished their church duties, he spoke to them relative to having his marriage with Catherine Humpherville, the daughter of a prominent fur trader, validated and blessed by them. he also wished to have his children baptized into the faith of his forbears. Being a well educated man, Pierre Pambrun lifted the atmosphere of his post to a high level, he refused to have drunken hangers-on or other undesirables about the place. His children attended school at Fort Vancouver or at the Whitman Mission at Wai-lat-pu. Fort Walla Walla had been built about two decades previous by Northwesters and had been formerly known as NezPerce, later it was changed to its present name. It was a comfortable place, Pambrun had a good garden, his cellar was stocked with vegetables and dairy products and he kept cows and swine. His table was always well supplied with the best food obtainable in this frontier post.

(1) The name of Pierre Chrysologue Pambrun is listed, among the illustrious dead of early times on the monument erected by the United States Daughters of 1812 at the site of the ancient burial ground at Fort Vancouver.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Pambrun

A French Canadian of mixed blood. Mr. Pambrun was in charge of Hudson's Bay Company's Fort Walla Walla from as early as 1832 until his death in May 1841. He was fifty-four when he died and had been with the Hudson's Bay company for twenty six years. He left a wife and seven children. Mrs. Pambrun was a native woman who spoke some French but little English. Mrs. Pambrun and her children came to Waiilatpu to help when Narcissa had her child, Alice Clarissa.

Narcissa returned the favor in the summer of 1838, traveling to Fort Walla Walla twice to aid the ill Mrs. Pambrun. She and her children left for Fort Vancouver after the death of her husband.

Agents of Old Fort Listed

Eleven Traders Saw Service.

With the site of Old Fort Walla walla to be under the waters of McNary Pool this year, it is of more than passing interest to list the fur-trading agents who were in charge of operations of the old outpost through its years on the banks of the Columbia.

W. D. Church has submitted a list which he secured from John R. White, Waitsburg historian. The list was compiled from the archives of the Hudson's Bay Company.

1818-1823

Alexander Ross of the Northwest Company. This Canadian concern merged with the Hudson's Bay Company in 1821. Ross and Donald McKenzie led the party that built the original Fort Nez Perce.

1823-1824

John Warren Dease from Rupert's Land. Appointed in July, 1822 and took charge of the fort in the spring of 1823.

1825-1830

Samuel Black former Northwest Company employee

1830-1831

Humpherville, Catherine - was born at York Factory on the Hudson Bay to Thomas Humpherville and his native (or Metisse) wife Anne. She married Pierre Pambrun there, and progressed westward with him from fort to fort over the years. After his death in 1842, she lived at Fort Vancouver, doing fine needlework to support and educate her children. When they were well along, she went to Oregon City to live with her eldest daughter, Maria, who had married Dr. Forbes Barclay. Her last years were spent with her 3rd daughter, Harriet Harger, at West Chehalem, near Newberg, where she is buried.

'Catherine smoked a pipe, as many pioneer women did. Pierre wanted her to give it up, but she couldn't seem to do so. He made a trip to England, and when he came back he brought a pair of diamond ear-rings. "These are for you" he said "if you will give up smoking." She tried but the habit was too strong, and the ear-rings were laid aside. After his death they disappeared. The family accused no one, but so many going in and out at a time like that _.' "It's just a little family recollection." (Theresa Truchot, 1870).

Pierre and Catherine Pambrun, emigrants of 1826

Pioneer Family of the Month - May 1997

Born on December 17, 1792, in the Canadian province of Quebec, Pierre Chrysologue Pambrun traveled as far east as England and as far west as the Pacific Ocean in his lifetime. His father, an educated man, made every effort to ensure that Pierre was properly schooled, and Pierre's education served him well in later years. As a young man, Pierre enlisted to fight in the War of 1812 on the side of the British. He served with distinction, rising through the enlisted ranks and finally mustering out as an officer in the spring of 1815 through measure of his deeds. In April, he entered the service of the Hudson's Bay Company.

His education won Pierre a clerkship in the Hudson's Bay Company, which was unusual for a Quebecois -- as a general rule, French Canadians served the HBC as trappers, voyageurs, or in menial positions -- and he eventually rose to the post of Chief Factor of Fort Walla Walla in 1839. His first year with the Company was perhaps his most remarkable, as he was involved in the defense of the Red River settlement (now known as Winnipeg) when the territorial conflict between the HBC and the North West Company turned violent. Pierre was one of a handful of defenders who escaped by swimming the Red River under cover of darkness, and he later testified in London against the men accused of killing Governor Robert Semple in the assault on the Red River settlement.

Pierre returned to Canada in 1819 and began drifting westward in his service to the Hudson's Bay Company. After several assignments, he came to Fort Vancouver in 1826. Strictly speaking, he entered the Oregon Country in 1825 when he helped built Fort Kilmaurs on Babine Lake in northern British Columbia. This fell within the vast Columbia District headed by Dr. John McLoughlin, but he did not enter McLoughlin's direct service until presenting himself at Fort Vancouver the following year.

Pierre brought his wife, Catherine "Kitty" Humperville, to the Oregon Country. Kitty was the daughter of a Cree Indian woman named Ann and Thomas Humperville, a British officer stationed at Fort York. Kitty's father was apparently reassigned when she was a child, and though the family never saw him again, he continued to send money to Ann and his children for many years. Without an English speaker in the home, Kitty grew up speaking her native language and French. After marrying Pierre, she moved from fort to fort with her husband, and the worst of their troubles over the years seemed to stem from the fact that, like many women on the western frontier, Kitty smoked a pipe. Pierre wanted her to give up the habit so badly that he bought a pair of diamond earrings and promised to give them to her if she would only quit; she couldn't, and he never gave her the earrings. On December 8, 1838, Kitty was baptized at Fort Vancouver by the Rev. Father Francis Blanchet, later to become the first Archbishop of Oregon.

After working under Dr. McLoughlin at Fort Vancouver for six years, Pierre was assigned as chief clerk in charge of Fort Walla Walla in March, 1832. This was an important post, as it was the jumping-off point for trapping expeditions into the Snake River wilderness and a center of trade for the Indians of the surrounding plains and deserts -- most notably the Nez Perce, Cayuse, and, of course, the Walla Wallas. Fort Walla Walla was also, by virtue of its location, an important stop on the cross-country trail to the United States and Canada proper. For all these reasons, it was also a difficult post to manage. Pierre succeeded, however, and was promoted to chief trader, or Factor, of the fort in late 1839

The solution Pierre seems to have adopted was to draw a sharp division between guests of the fort and potential competitors. He welcomed everyone to Fort Walla Walla except traders and explorers who might serve parties interested in scouting the HBC's territory with the intent of opening it to competition. In 1836, he not only warmly received the missionaries Dr. Marcus Whitman and Rev. Henry Spalding, but traveled with them for more than a month, escorting them to see the sites chosen for their missions, and later helped organize the construction of the mission buildings and stockades. The good Dr. Whitman, a Presbyterian, wrote glowingly of the hospitality and invaluable assistance rendered by Pierre in his capacity as chief clerk of the fort, which Whitman found quite remarkable given that his host was a Roman Catholic. On the other hand, he was quite inhospitable to the expedition led by Captain Benjamin Bonneville, allowing them the shelter of the fort but refusing to sell them supplies.

Pierre was remembered universally in emigrant diaries and reminiscences as a generous, friendly man. One early overlander from Illinois, Thomas Jefferson Farnham, wrote in his diary that he considered Pierre to be a "fine, companionable fellow; I hope he will command Walla Walla as long as Britons occupy it, and live a hundred years afterwards."

Sadly, Pierre was killed on May 15, 1841, when he was thrown from a horse he was trying to break. Because of his untimely death, Pierre never had the opportunity to have his photograph taken. There is apparently no surviving likeness of him; if he ever commissioned a portrait of himself or his family, it has since been lost. His will left everything to Kitty and their nine children, five sons and four daughters. Kitty and the children moved back to Fort Vancouver, where she supported the family doing fine needlework. The family did well, by and large, with the eldest daughter marrying Dr. Forbes Barclay of Oregon City and the eldest son later settling in the Walla Walla area and becoming a prominent rancher.

Andrew Pambrun - Metis Immigrants in Walla Walla

Andrew Pambrun was born at Cumberland House near the mouth of the Saskatchewan River in 1821. His father Pierre Pambrun was Chief Trader at Fort Walla Walla from 1831-1841. Andrew attended school at Fort Vancouver in 1832 and then at Red River School in Manitoba where he stayed and taught for 6 years.

Pioneer Picnic Roster 1892 in Weston Oregon shows A.D. Pambrun arriving in Oregon 1831 by water. (Probably Columbia River). Seems he was having trouble getting naturalization at the time, so the record on the picnic roster is inaccurate.

Pierre Pambrun served as Chief Factor at Fort Walla Walla. Unfortunately, he had a horse accident and was killed. As the custom, his wife and children relocated to the department's headquarter's at Fort Vancouver. In 1840, Dr. Forbes Barclay (born in the Shetland Islands) was hired as the Doctor at Fort Vancouver. There he met Maria Pambrun, the daughter of Pierre Pambrun. They were soon married. Barclay retired from the Company in 1850, moving to Oregon City with his family. He he served as a physician, fireman and two terms as Mayor of Oregon City, Oregon. He and his wife are buried in the Old Cemetery in Oregon City. His home was relocated next to Dr. McLoughlin home where they now serve as a popular tourist site. Fort Walla Walla. Most historians believe there were at least six forts named Fort Walla Walla. One of the first forts (left) was located near the merging of the Walla Walla River (it was also known as Fort Nez Perce operated by Chief Factor, Pierre Pambrun) and the Columbia and Snake Rivers. It is said that Walla Walla means "merging of rivers". This 1818 view looking east from the from the Columbia River, appeared in Ross, Fur Hunters of the Far West, 1855. Middle: This picture is a drawing by Joseph Drayton that was included in Charles Wilkes book, Narrative of the United States Exploring Expedition During the Year 1838-1842, Vol 4, 391. Right: Today, part of the original property of the last Fort Walla Walla that was operated by the United State Army, has 8 acres dedicated to the Fort Walla Walla Museum Complex. The rest of the property consist of original buildings of the that make up the Veteran's Hospital, a military cemetery, park and nature/wildlife area. I served as Executive Director at the Fort Walla Walla Museum from 1995 to 1997.

Barclay House

719 Center Street Oregon City, Oregon 97045 U.S.A.

Dr. Forbes Barclay (1812-1873)

'Arctic explorer, physician, public official, philanthropist' Dictionary of Oregon History, Binfords & Mort, 1956

After a reportedly disastrous voyage into the Arctic in search of a 'northwest passage' and other exploits of his young adulthood, Dr. Barclay came from Scotland to Fort Vancouver as a Hudson's Bay Company physician in 1840.

He and his wife Maria Pambrun Barclay and seven children lived in Oregon City where they were prominent in community affairs. Dr. Barclay served variously as mayor of Oregon City, schools superintendent and first coroner in Oregon, as well as a physician.

Their home, built in 1849, remained in the Barclay family until the 1930's, when it was moved up the hill from the waterfront to its present location adjacent to the McLoughlin House. The former apothecary is now an office; the formal parlor, now a gift shop; dining room and everyday parlor, now a meeting room. These three rooms are now open to the public and serve as adjunct facilities to the McLoughlin house.

An illustrated history of the state of Oregon : containing a history of Oregon from the earliest period of its discovery to the, page 980

DR FORBES BARCLAY – among the worthy and good men who came to Oregon City, in 1850, none are more deserving of honorable mention than Dr. Barclay, now deceased. This gentleman was born on the Shetland Isles, Scotland, December 25, 1812. His parents were Dr. John and Charlotte (Spencer) Barclay, the latter the daughter of William Spencer, of Gardenstein, Scotland.

In 1839 Dr. Barclay left England for Vancouver, to take the position of physician for the Hudson's Bay Company. The journey occupied nine months, and he remained ten months treating the officers of the company and all who needed medical treatment. In 1850 he came to Oregon City, and continued his practice for many years, never refusing to respond to any call made upon his skill, whether the patient was rich or poor, far or near, and by his liberality, as well as by his ability as a physician, he won hosts of friends wherever he chanced to be. He practiced for twenty-three years in Oregon City, during all of that time he utterly ignored himself, and strove to benefit humanity.

He was married in 1842 to Miss Maud Pambrun, a native of British Columbia, whose father served in the war of 1812, and later was connected with the Hudson's Bay company. The Doctor and his wife had the following children: Peter T., residing in California, secretary of a company; Alexander I., resides at the home; the daughter, A.C. A., now resides at the home place; Hattie, wife of Mr. William Pratt, superintendent of the locks at Oregon City; and William C., a seaman, first mate of a ship.

The death of this good man occurred in 1873, from typhoid and pneumonia, contracted from his patients, his system being relaxed from overwork. His faithful wife survived him seventeen years, until 1890, when she, too, passed away, in her sixty-third year. She was one of the typical women of Oregon City, and was highly esteemed for her many noble traits of both head and heart.

The Doctor was Treasurer of the Masonic lodge at Oregon City, from 1853 until the time of his death. He was reared a Presbyterian, but in the absence of his own church, when he came to Oregon City, he joined the Methodist Church, of which he was a consistent member.

In 1850 he and his wife built the home on Main Street, on a half block of land, which he purchased for the purpose. The material for the house was brought from Boston, Massachusetts. The workmen received $10 per day for erecting the house, which when completed cost $17,000. Here this good man and his family lived for forty-two years, and the property is very valuable now.

There never occurred a death in Oregon City which caused so much general mourning as that of Dr. Barclay's. In addition to his professional ability he was a man calculated to win and retain the admiration and respect of all with whom he was brought in contact, either socially or professionally.

Marcia; Louis Pambrun was a step-son to Alexander Pambrun; Alex had one daughter from his first wife. His second marriage was to the widow of Antoine Burdeau of Deer Lodge. Her name was Theresa Cecile Gallineau, she had children from Antoine Burdeau, these children went by the name of Pambrun taken from their step father Alex.

Following are the names of the step-children:

1. Cecile Antoinette Pambrun - married #1. Edward Dennis, #2. Charles McKelvery
2. Louis Pambrun married Indian woman named "Hollering Easy. (This could be Annie).

Louis (Burdeau) Pambrun and Hollering Easy had the following children:

- #1. Peter Pambrun (Burdeau)
 - a. John Pambrun (Burdeau)
 - b. Frank Pambrun (Brudeau)
- #2. Dominick Pambrun (Burdeau)

- a. George Pambrun (Burdeau) - father of Audra Pambrun
- b. Lorman Pambrun (Burdeau)
- c. (3 or 4 daughters)
- #3. Dave Pambrun (Burdeau) b. 1888

Montana, its story and biography : a history of aboriginal and territorial Montana and three decades of statehood, page 1_186-7

The winter of 1857-58 was spent in Beaverhead Valley and on the Big Hole River. The Stuart brothers and Anderson had as neighbors at the latter camp Jacob Meeks, Robert Dempsey and family, Jackson Antoine Leclair and family, an Oliver and Michael Leclair; and scattered around in a radius of twenty-five miles were the following persons, who spent the same winter there: Richard Grant, Sr., and family, John F. Grant and family, Thomas Pambrun and Family.....

"As to my ability to inform you along these lines I wish to say that I have known the Lemhi Indians since 1877 and was a trader among them for fifteen years. In my business I at one time employed Thomas Pambrun, a son of the Hudson's Bay company factor, Pierre Pambrun at Fort Walla Walla. This man Thomas was half French and half Indian; a most trustworthy man and a master of fifteen Indian languages. He had met Bonneville at Fort Walla Walla and knew much of the history of the west. Later in life he had married a sister of the chief of the Lemhis. I can talk the Shoshoni language quite proficiently and by the use of the sign language I have been able to make myself understood among any Indians with which I have come in contact. I have conversed with Indians who had good recollections as far back as the forties. I was intimately acquainted with a few members of the Mormon colony which settled in the Lemhi country in 1855 and have gained considerable history of this tribe from them. In 1894, I had the good fortune to help Dr. Elliot Coues, who was passing over and checking up on the Lewis and Clark trail and absorbed from him enough enthusiasm concerning this expedition to make of me ever afterwards a zealous student of this episode, especially that part concerning the American Indian. Therefore, I have known intimately the Shoshonis for almost half a century; have studied the Lewis and Clark expedition for more than thirty years and have been over most of their trail from the three forks of the Missouri to the Pacific ocean" (Rees: ISU Archives).

Notes for JOHN MCCRACKEN:

An illustrated history of the state of Oregon : By Rev H K Hines, D. D., The Lewis Publishing Company, Chicago, 1893 Pg 358

Colonel John McCracken, who has been a resident of the State of Oregon since November, 1850, is a native of England, born in the city of London, July 11, 1826. His father, John McCracken, Sr., was a native of Dublin, Ireland, but was born of Scotch parents. He emigrated to the United States in 1832, accompanied by his wife and six children. The mother died in 1836, and he died the following year; but two of the children survive. Our subject then went to live with Gilbert Emmons, a farmer in East Haddam, Connecticut, who treated him with great kindness and consideration. Mr. Emmons had sons who were merchants in Rhode Island, and they employed their father's protegee from the time he was sixteen until he had reached his nineteenth year. He then returned to New York and worked with an older brother until his twenty-third year. At this age he came to California and engaged in business in Stockton; the firm was Underhill & McCracken. Learning of the large Government land donations in Oregon, Colonel McCracken came to the State and located at Oregon City, where he purchased an interest in the Island Mills, both flour and sawmills. General Joseph Lane and his son were partners in the business. In the fall of 1852, they had quantities of wheat for which they paid $5 a bushel; a freshet came which wrecked this property, necessitating an immense outlay of money. When the mills were in repair and ready for grinding, flour had dropped from $40 a barrel to $10 and $12. The Lanes sold their interest, and Colonel McCracken was obliged to relinquish his share for indebtedness, and begin his career in the commercial world anew.

In the winter of 1853-'54 he was appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General by Governor Curry, receiving at the same time the rank of Colonel. He served in that capacity two years. In 1857 he engaged in the produce commission business in Portland, Mr. Richards, an old schoolmate, being his partner; the latter made San Francisco his headquarters, and Colonel McCracken managed the business at Portland. They conducted a very profitable establishment until 1865, when Mr. Richards was lost off the coast of Crescent City. The firm then became McCracken, Merrill & Co., and this firm exported the first two ship-loads of flour from this port, one to England and one to Australia. In 1870 they dissolved partnership, and Colonel McCracken continued the business alone. In 1874-'75 he had several cargoes of wheat afloat, and when the Turko-Russian war terminated wheat went down with a crash. The same year he lost very heavily on wool, the market being greatly depressed by the labor riots in Pittsburg. From the fall of 1882 until the fall of 1884, he was in the wholesale grocery business with Mr. Mason, and carried on the trade alone until 1888. He then sold out and made arrangements with the Tacoma & Roche Harbor Line Company to handle the product of their works in Portland. He and his two sons are now doing a large and successful business, handling quantities of building material. The firm is J. McCracken & Co., James and Henry being the partners.

The Colonel was married in Oregon, in 1857, to Miss Ada Pambrun, a native of this State and a daughter of Alexander Pambrun, agent of the Hudson's Bay Company, at Walla Walla. They have had born to them five children, who are living; Henry E.; James R.; John F.; Ada M., the wife of Charles B. Hurley, of Tacoma; and Robert G. The third son is in business at Sacramento, and the two oldest sons are married and reside in Portland. Colonel McCracken is a Mason, and is devoted to the order. He has been Master of his lodge, High Priest of his chapter, and Commander of his commandery. He was Inspector-General of the Thirty-third degree, Scottish Rite. Until the breaking out of the Civil war he was a Democrat in his political views, but since that time he has affiliated with the Republican party. During the great strife his heart was with the old flag and the Government of the Union. He has always been interested in the growth and prosperity of the State, and takes a just pride in the place she has won among the sister States of this Union.

Isobel Pambrun

Mrs. Alfred (Isabel) Pambrun, 69, of 257 W. Morton, formerly of Athena, died at a local nursing home Thursday.

Born Aug. 9, 1901, in Weston, she was the daughter of James and Rebecca Fuson, early pioneers of the area. She attended schools in Weston and married Alfred Pambrun in Pendleton April 30, 1918. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1968.

After their marriage, the Pambrun's farmed south of Athena until 1939 when they moved to Tacoma. They came to Walla Walla from Tacoma in 1968.

Besides her husband at the home, Mrs. Pambrun is survived by a sister, Mrs. IL. L.(Willmoth) Reynould of Weston.

Survices will be held at 10:30 am Tuesday at the Munselle-Rhodes chapel in Milton-Freewater with Rev. Mark Carmichael of the Church of the Brethren in Weston officiating.

FRANK TRUCHOT, P. O. Choteau, was born in France, November 21, 1833; son of Herbert and Ann Truchot He remained in his native country, where he worked in vineyards until 19 years of age. After coming to the United States he worked for a while in New York, soon going to Cincinnati and Louisville and through Arkansas, Florida and Kansas, arriving in Utah in 1857, where he was for some time engaged in herding mules for the government. In 1859 he came into Deer Lodge Co, M. T., and followed trapping, hunting and trading with the Indians, but soon after embarked in the freighting business, and was the first to commence farming in the vicinity of Deer Lodge. Here he remained from 1864 till 1868 and then went to California. After spending one winter there our subject returned to Utah, where he bought a band of cattle, which he brought into Deer Lodge county, where he opened another farm and where he remained until 1874. He then came to the Dearborn river, herding cattle and horses, remaining there until 1881, at which time he took up his present ranch on the Teton, where he is now residing with his family, consisting of his wife and six children.

A Prominent pioneer is no more. Francois Truchot, wealthy and influential citizen, dies suddenly at his home. Honored and respected, upright and energetic, throughout long life. Francois Truchot, among the most widely known citizens of Teton county, a pioneer in North Montana, stockman, owner of extensive properties, and a shareholder and trustee in various corporations, died very suddenly at about 9:30 Sunday evening, [January 10, 1909] at his home, a mile north of Choteau. Mr. Truchot had been in his usual robust health until a few days prior to his death, though complaining at times of not feeling quite well. On Sunday he felt somewhat indisposed, and had a physician called, though his condition was not thought to be serious. He was up and about the house a part of the time throughout the day, at times lying down. Between nine and ten o'clock in the evening, he retired, and almost instantly after bidding good night to his daughter, Miss Kathrinette Truchot, he fell back dead. Mr. Truchot left an estate estimated at $300,000. He is reported to be owner of valuable property in France in addition to his extensive holdings in this country. The funeral was held today from the residence, Rev. Father MacCormack being in charge. A.C. Warner, Chas. Wymer, Francis Pambrun, A.C. Burbank, Wm. Hodgskiss and J.G. Bair acted as pall bearers. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The public school and also the high school were dismissed in the afternoon as a mark of respect. The business places in Choteau were closed during the time of the funeral. The remains were laid to rest in Choteau cemetery, in the presence of a very large crowd that assembled regardless of the extremely cold weather. The following obituary has been prepared by a close friend of the family and states accurately the leading facts of Mr. Truchot's life. Auguste Francois Truchot was born in Bussieres, Les Belmont, France, [on] November 21, 1833. Here he lived with his parents until he was 19 years of age. In 1852 he left his native land and came to America. When he left France the sum of his worldly possessions amounted to $19 in money. He crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel, and upon his arrival in New York City he found himself in a strange land with $1.50 in his pocket. He could not speak nor understand a work of English, but when he left France his people had given him the address of a cousin who was in business in New York. This cousin's name was Truchot. Unfortunately, the letter became lost during his passage over, and he had no other way of finding his cousin except by walking the streets and looking for his place of business. By accident he saw a sign displayed over the door of a business house bearing his cousin's name. For a while he worked for this cousin, and he boarded in a family who told him they would teach him to speak English. After some time he told them that he thought he knew enough of English to start out and make his fortune. His cousin asked him to show him how much English he had learned, and then Mr. Truchot was dismayed to learn that all of the time that he thought he had been studying the English language he had been learning German instead. In the meantime some of his companions had gone to Cincinnati, so Mr. Truchot started for that city, and after many trials arrived there safely and worked during the years of 1850 and 1854 at day's labor, and at the end of the two years the man whom he had been working for had become hopelessly bankrupt, which resulted in Mr. Truchot losing his entire two years' wages. In the years 1854 and 1855 he worked in New Orleans and St. Louis. In the spring of 1857 he joined General Johnson's expedition against the Mormons, but left the command at Fort Bridger in the fall of '57 and came to Montana, where he lived every since until his death. In 1859 he worked for Captain Grant, chief factor of the Hudson Bay company, and drove cattle for him into the Bitter Root valley. Here he traded with the Indians for a few years, then settled down on a ranch on Warm Springs creek, 18 miles above Deer Lodge city. He helped to build the first frame house in Deer Lodge for John Grant. Deer Lodge was his home from 1859 to 1874, in which latter year he moved to the Dearborn; here he lived from 1874 until 1881, engaged in the cattle business. In 1881 Mr. Truchot moved from Dearborn to his ranch near Choteau, where he lived until the time of his death, following the business of ranching and stock growing. During a part of the time that he lived in Deer Lodge he freighted provisions from Salt Lake, purchasing flour in Salt Lake City at $8 to $10 a sack, and selling it in Montana at $35 a sack. Everything else in the way of provisions was high in proportion. Gold dust was the medium of exchange in those days, and was very plentiful. Mr. Truchot often told his friends that he left France just in time to escape being conscripted into the army which was being raised to carry on the Crimean war, one of the State measures of the Third Napoleon. On the 16th day of May, 1877, Mr. Truchot was united in marriage to Emily H. Pambrun, daughter of Alexander Pambrun, one of our most widely known and esteemed citizens. Mrs. Truchot and a large family of children survive the death of their husband and father. [More tribute not transcribed] [Reprinted from the Choteau Acantha January 14, 1909]

One of Old Teton Ranches Is Sold

Choteau, March 4 -- One of the oldest ranches in Teton county changed hands when George Stuper purchased what has been known for many years as the Truchot ranch, One and one-half miles north of Choteau, from Mrs. Louis Nichols, daughter of the former owner, the late Francois Truchot. The tract includes the home ranch, which extends on either side of Spring creek, being well adapted to dairying, in which business it is understood, the new owner will engage.

John B. Pambrun, Indian Scout, once with Gen. Custer, is dead Here

John B. Pambrum, Nez Perce-Shoshone Indian, 73 years of age, who served as a scout for General Custer in the vicinity of Fort Shaw, died at a local hospital yesterday of the infirmities of old age.

According to the traditions of his family, Pambrun was born at Big Bend on the Sanke River, in Idaho, in 1855. At the age of two years he was taken by his father Thomas Pambrun to Salt Lake City, where he lived for five years and was brought by his father to Montana making their home at Deer Lodge, where he received early schooling from a traveling teacher, until 1866 when he came to Helena.

At the age of 11 he sought employment here and met the late Conrad Khors, at the Travis Livery stable. Mr. Khors told him he was too young to find work here, but furnished him with clothing and advised him to go to Choteau, about two miles north of the present town by that name.

Worked for Government

Arriving at Choteau he was given a job as horse wrangle by a man named Armstead, who was a government agent. Choteau at that time was an Indian agency and trading post. Here he learned to speak the language of the Blackfeet and when a young man became interpreter.

When General Custer went to Fort Shaw young Pambrun went with his command to take the place of Henry Bosstick, a former scout, who had been engaged by Custer, but was forced to decline the position on account of failing health.

For several years Pambrun and his family have lived in Helena and Choteau.

The deceased is survived by his wife, three daughters and three sons, Mrs. B. Amelin of Choteau; Mrs. J. Forres of Denver; Mrs. F. Legona of Great Falls and John, Edward and Dewey Pambrum of Helena.

The funeral will be held from St. Helena's cathedral this morning at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in Ressurrection Cemetery. Opp and Conrad have charge of the funeral.
