Our goal is to research the pioneers that came into the Walla Walla Valley Area, as a starter for those doing their family genealogy; we are not related.

History of Sumner, Maine

From

A Gazetteer of the State of Maine

By Geo. J. Varney

Published by B. B. Russell, 57 Cornhill,

Boston 1886

Sumner lies on the eastern part of the middle portion of Oxford County. It is bounded by Peru on the north, Hartford on the east, Buckfield on the south, and Woodstock and Paris on the west. The greatest length of the town is north-west and south-east about 11 miles; and its width averages nearly 5½. Through almost the whole length of the town runs the West Branch of Twenty-Mile River, and the East Branch of this river forms the eastern boundary line. Near this river at the north-east is Labrador Pond, west of the centre is Pleasant Pond, and in the south-eastern part of the town is North Pond, largest of the three, having an area of about one-third of a square mile. Smaller are Shag Pond in the north-west corner, and Little Labrador in the eastern part of the town. Black Mountain, noted for its blueberries, is an extensive elevation in the northern part; and Spence Hills on the south-western line. Cushman's Hill, south of the centre, and Hedgehog Hill in the south-east, are also considerable elevations. The surface generally is uneven and broken, but the soil is generally productive. At Jackson Village (West Sumner post office) are a saw-mill for long lumber, a shingle-mill, grist-mill, cooperage, etc.; and at East Sumner are saw, shingle and grist-mills, and various small manufactures. The main business of the inhabitants is agricultural, in which they have met with good success, and the town generally bears the appearance of thrift. The F?mford Falls and Buckfield Railroad touches the south-eastern part of the town, and has a station near East Sumner. The Grand Trunk railroad station at West Paris is about 8 miles from Sumner Centre.

This town was formerly one with Hartford; and these sections bore respectively the names of East and West Butterfield. On June 13, 1798, it was separately incorporated under its present name in honor of Governor Increase Sumner. The first settler in town was Charles Bisbee, from Pembroke, Mass. The first settlement in the south-east part was made in the same year by Increase Robinson and Noah Bosworth. Most of the first settlers came from Plymouth County, Mass., and were Revolutionary soldiers. Among the earliest were Increase and Joseph Robinson, Simeon Barrett, Noah Bosworth, Hezekiah Stetson, John Briggs, John Crockett, Benjamin Heald, Mesech Keen, Barney Jackson and Oliver Cummings. These obtained the titles to their lands from Massachusetts. Oliver Cummings, from Dunstable, Mass., struck the first blow of the axe at what is now the centre of the town. For some years the settlers were obliged to carry their grist upon their backs ten miles to a mill in Turner, being guided by a spotted line through the woods. The first grist as well as the first saw-mill in the town was erected by Increase Robinson in 1783.

7. JAMES S4 BARRETT (JAMES SULLIVAN3, SIMEON2, SIMEON1) was born 24 Apr 1836 in Sumner, Oxford county, Maine, and died 27 Dec 1910. He married CORA M PARKER Jan 1879 in Walla Walla, WA. She was born 24 Aug 1851 in Jay, Maine, and died 30 Jun 1937.

An illustrated history of Walla Walla County, state of Washington

JAMES S BARRETT, shoe merchant, Walla Walla, was born in Sumner, Oxford county, Maine, in 1838. He was reared on a farm in that state, receiving such education as the public schools afforded. On attaining his majority, he went to Massachusetts to learn the art of manufacturing shoes, and two years later (in 1861) he set out by steamer to the Pacific coast. Locating in mining regions of California, he followed mining exclusively for about five years. in April, 1867, however, he purchased the Stetson & Buck boot manufacturing establishment, which business he conducted, together with mining, for several years, at one time being absent for a brief period on a trip east. Finally selling out in 1875 he moved to San Fransico, California, where he purchased an interest in a boot and shoe manufactory at 1208 Market street. Shortly afterward he bought the remaining interest and the entire business was conducted by him until July, 1878.

Mr Barrett then moved to Walla Walla where he purchased property and opened a store for the manufacture and sale of boots and shoes. He has devoted himself assiduously ever since to the building up and extending of this business, employing at times several men in his manufacturing industry, though he also handles custom-made goods. He is a thorough business man, possessed of the foresight and good judgment characteristic of the successful in commercial pursuits. As a man and a citizen, his standing in the community is of the highest. He is a very prominent Odd Fellow, having been connected with that order for forty years, and having passed through all the offices and received all the honors in the gift of the fraternity. Mr Barrett was married in Walla Walla in January, 1879, to Cora M. Parker, a native of Jay, Maine, and they now have two children, Annie M and Parker.

8. AUGUSTA J4 BARRETT (JAMES SULLIVAN3, SIMEON2, SIMEON1) was born 17 Apr 1839 in East Sumner, Maine, and died 05 Jan 1913 in San Diego, CA. She married MATTHEW SHERMAN 10 May 1867 in California. He was born 11 Oct 1827 in Charleston, Massachusetts, and died 05 Jul 1898 in San Diego, CA.

Notes for AUGUSTA J BARRETT:

<http://www.sandiegohistory.org/journal/72fall/grandmother.htm>

My Grandmother Augusta Barrett Sherman was a very sensitive and kind person. She loved children of all ages, and always had time to listen to their problems. She made friends of people in all walks of life, and never failed to help a friend in need.

Her home was her palace, and she thoroughly enjoyed entertaining. Grandmother was active in the city's civic and social affairs, and as a member of the old St. Paul's Episcopal Church, on C Street, I remember Reverend Charles Barnes was often a guest at Grandmother's table on Sundays after church.

She was an active member of the Ladies Pioneer Society of San Diego, and the Women's Relief Corps of the State of Maine. The Pioneer meetings were held in different homes, and I was allowed to attend. (I'll never forget those horsehair sofas -- how they scratched!)

Grandmother was born Augusta Jane Barrett on April 17, 1839, in East Sumner, Maine, on a farm that belonged to her ancestors since the American Revolution. She died January 5, 1913, at her home in San Diego.

My grandfather, Captain Matthew Sherman, was born in Charleston, Massachusetts, October 11, 1827. He died July 5, 1898, in San Diego. He served as Mayor of San Diego during The years 1891 and 1892. They had two children, Matthew B. Sherman, and Fanny B. Sherman, my mother, who married Charles L. Sloane.

What a revelation it would be for my grandparents to see San Diego today!

Frances Augusta Sloane, a native San Diegan and longtime member of the San Diego Historical Society, is the granddaughter of Captain and Mrs. Matthew Sherman and Captain and Mrs. Hampton P. Sloane, also early pioneers in San Diego. She was born in 1906 in the old Sherman home at 22nd and Market Streets, and lived there until about 1913 when the house was remodeled as the Sherman Apartments. She served as Secretary of the Apartment and Rental Owners Association in San Diego for many years.

Augusta Barrett Sherman (1839-1913)

[Augusta Jane Barrett was born on April 17, 1839, in East Sumner, Maine, on a farm that had belonged to her ancestors since the American Revoution. She died January 5, 1913, at her home in San Diego.]

When I was a very small girl I used to say that when I grew up I was going to California to teach school. When I was grown my dream was realized for I came to California, and after residing in the vicinity of San Francisco for a year or two, fortune or fate led my steps to San Diego - there to take charge of the only school in the county. My friends thought I was going out of the world, but there was something about this far away, almost unknown, southern country that seemed to have a charm for me.

On September 1, 1866, I left San Francisco on the Steamer "Pacific," Captain Thorn, Master; and on the morning of September 4 we rounded Point Loma and steamed into San Diego and dropped anchor off shore in the vicinity of what is now known as F Street. There were no wharves then and we were put into small boats and rowed as near the shore as possible, and then the sailors waded the rest of the way, carrying the passengers in their arms, and landing them safely upon dry land.

There was one vehicle upon the beach awaiting our arrival, and in it I took my seat and was driven to Old Town. The settlement was at Old Town, as what is now San Diego was simply to me that morning a long stretch of brush covered land. The houses around the Plaza (Old Town) were in good repair, and the ruins one sees at the present time (1890) were thrifty looking places and were filled with people. Such a change! It makes one sad to contemplate. There were very few women, besides the native population, less than a dozen all told. The school children numbered about forty, mostly of Spanish origin.

There were no steam laundries in those days. Most of such work was done by Indian women. They would take the clothes to the bed of the San Diego River and then dig in the sand until they found water, which was very near the surface. They would sit by this miniature well and wash all day long. I used to say, "What patient creatures!"

We had mail once a week, and a steamer once a month. Our mail was brought by stage from Los Angeles, and was supposed to come and depart once each week, but sometimes it would be delayed because of storms. It was impossible to cross the streams, as there was not a bridge between here and Los Angeles. Sometimes in the rainy season we received our mail in a very wet condition, but of course that did not happen often. We were so glad to see the mail stage come we never thought of making any complaints.

There was but one church, the Roman Catholic, where services were held occasionally. The same church building and bells are still in use. Father Ubach came late in that same year, 1866, and remained permanently. Once each month he held services in the English language, so I used to attend them when I could understand.

The feast day for San Diego is on the 8th day of December, and how they used to celebrate! I witnessed my first bull fight on that day. The Plaza was fenced in for the arena, the animals turned loose in the enclosure, and then the fun began -- if fun it could be called. This generally lasted two or three days, but the festivities kept up until after the New Year, with the different kinds of Spanish sports. One could hear the violin and guitar in all directions, for the Spanish people are very fond of music and dancing.

After my marriage to Captain [Matthew] Sherman in May, 1867, I came to New Town to live, as this portion of the town was called at that time. My husband and myself were the only inhabitants, our nearest neighbor being four miles away at Old Town. There were four houses, besides the Barracks. The Barracks, it might be interesting to know, was framed in the state of Maine and brought around Cape Horn in a sailing vessel and put up in San Diego, I think in the year 1852 -- soon after California became a part of the United States. In April of 1867 "Father" [Alonzo] Horton came and made his purchase of land and returned to San Francisco. In the autumn of the same year our population increased by two, an old gentleman and his wife, so that I had one near neighbor.

In 1867 our "fathers" at Washington got the idea that smuggling was being carried on at this port. I never knew what it was that was being smuggled. So they sent the revenue cutter Reliance for our protection. She sailed around the Horn and arrived here early in 1868. The vessel remained here a number of months, but finding that there was nothing for them to do, she was ordered to Alaska.

I will speak of our water system. Of course we had one. The idea had always prevailed that there was no water to be had in this portion of San Diego. But during the Civil War the soldiers dug a well and found water at a depth of about 24 feet. The location of this well was below what is now known as K Street, between 14th and 15th Streets. They put up a primitive windmill and used to haul water in barrels. This was the way the soldiers at the Barracks were supplied with water. Our own water system was a burro and two 10-gallon kegs. These kegs were fastened upon the back of the little animal. We gave him the name of "Patient Peter," he was so patient and wise. This little fellow used to bring his load of water for more than a mile. One day a stranger came along and was talking with my husband about the possibilities of the place (San Diego), and he asked, "Where do you get your water?" My husband, in reply, said, "I will show you where we get it." Just then Patient Peter came in view, led by an Indian, and my husband continued, "Here are our water-works." This stranger must have left, for we never saw him afterward.

As you will remember, "Father" Horton came to San Diego and made his purchase of land and then returned to San Francisco. Early in 1868 he returned with his family to reside. He soon commenced the survey in laying out the future city of San Diego. Now and then a settler came to make the new place his home. On the 4th of July we held a picnic in Rose Canyon, about four miles from Old Town. There was a stranger in our midst and of course curiosity was on tiptoe, for it was such an unusual occurrence, that we all wondered. He was an Englishman and came from Australia. We soon knew why he was there, for he built a store building on the corner of G and State Streets, and opened a store. His bill-heads read in this way: "J. Nash. General Merchandise. Established in 1868. Population, 23."

It takes plenty of courage to open a store under such conditions, but that is the material that pioneers are made of. Later Mr. Nash moved to Fifth and I Streets. About the same time, Captain Dunnells came with his family and purchased one of the four houses above mentioned, situated at the corner of "F" and State Streets, and opened a hotel called the "New San Diego Hotel." We began to feel by this time, with a store and a hotel, even if our population was only 23, we were getting to be quite a commercial town.

In the spring of 1868 we built a house and moved into it in the month of May. Then my nearest neighbor was over a mile away, as there were no buildings of any description on Horton's Addition at that time. We built the house before the streets were laid out, but we were fortunate enough to build the house upon a lot and not in the street. We were more unfortunate with the well we had dug, however, for later we found it to be in the street, and we had the trouble of filling it up again. This house is still standing on the northwest corner of 19th and I Streets.

On November 4, 1868, a memorable day for the whole country, for it was the Presidential election, the day that General Grant was elected President of the United States, and it was an interesting day for San Diego, as it was steamer day, and the steamer arrived on that morning. Everyone who could went to see it. On this particular morning there were more passengers than usual, and among them an Episcopal minister. He established a Mission, and our first Protestant services were held in the Barracks the following Sunday. Everything was very primitive. A very common table, covered with a white cloth, served for the altar, and our seats were boards resting upon boxes and oil cans. Mrs. Dunnells was the proud possessor of a musical instrument, a melodian, I think it was called, which she kindly loaned. It was taken to the place of meeting in a wheelbarrow and returned in the same way. The service of the church has never been more beautiful to me than it was in these plain surroundings. It was not very long before we had a building erected in which the services were held, and the following year nearly all denominations had their church societies organized. Two years later our Episcopal mission held its first Sunday School Christmas festival, There was neither paint nor whitewash, but we covered the studding and rafters with green boughs that grew on the hills. There were only eight scholars, and four of that number belonged to the Rector's family. We had a very small organ, and the children sang their Christmas carols and enjoyed the Christmas tree. The older folks enjoyed it, too.

On Christmas Eve, 1868, we had a Christmas tree, and there were gifts and good wishes for everyone. J. Nash, our merchant, gave all the ladies living in the new settlement material to make a calico dress. I always thought it was very generous, for common calico sold at that time for twenty cents per yard. A collection was taken up to purchase a bell for the school we hoped soon to establish. We had a bountiful supper and closed with dancing. Everybody was invited, and everybody came that could be there.

During the years 1868 and 1869 we made quite a rapid stride forward. A stage line to Fort Yuma was inaugurated by the Government, and the San Diego Union was first published, both with offices at Old Town. The Court also convened at the latter place. We had mail service twice instead of once a week, and steamers twice a month. A Post Office was established at New Town called South San Diego. You see, we were a suburb of Old Town.

We petitioned to the Supervisors for a School District, and succeeded in getting one, J. S. Mannasse & Company, merchants, gave lumber. We gave land and money and built a school house on the corner of 21st and N Street. We hired a young girl to take charge of the school, and paid her with money subscribed for the purpose. The following year an appropriation was made in regard to school money. I do not remember the exact number of pupils, but there were less than a dozen. That was the beginning of our school system, and when I see the children coming out of the school buildings now, I think to what large proportions small things can grow.

In March, 1869, I gave a party for my niece on her birthday and invited all the little girls. There were nine, including the recipient of the party. One little girl said to me, "Mrs. Sherman, I've come all around the world to get here. No doubt it did seem a very long way from Union and B Streets to 19th and I Streets, with no direct road. Our streets had been surveyed, but had not been travelled, and as they were covered with brush, they were not very easy walking. One of the girls, now grown-up, said to me not very long ago that she remembers so well what a lovely time they had. That was the first social event held in New San Diego for the "younger set."

On the fourth of July, 1869, we had a celebration. The exercises were held in a warehouse at the foot of Fifth Street, where the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's depot is now located. It was a small building built by Mr. Horton, and was afterwards used by A. Pauly & Sons as a store for general merchandise. We had a very modest procession: Mr. G. W. B. McDonald was President of the Day; Reverend Sydney Wilbur made the prayer. Captain Matthew Sherman read the Declaration of Independence, and Daniel Cleveland, Esq., was Orator of the Day. We had good singers in those days, the same as now, and the patriotic songs were sung with truly patriotic spirit. Our celebration was enthusiastic. It was not such a large gathering but it was an animated one. The fact that we were here, in this far away town of San Diego, did not keep us from feeling our joy and expressing it at the anniversary of our nation's birth. Tables stood on one side, spread with many good things to eat, and there was plenty for all. After the dinner was served, the tables were cleared and we indulged in a good old fashioned dance.

Our celebration last three days; the second day at Old Town, with horse racing and fancy riding, and the third day at Monument City. And for the information of those who never heard of Monument City, I will say it was situated somewhere in the vicinity of what is now South San Diego.

(Here, a portion is missing from the original text. Her memoirs resume with an account of San Diego's efforts to acquire a railroad.)

The City of San Diego gave a princely domain of land, and the citizens generally subscribed very liberally. In Washington, a bill for this railway was before Congress, and on March 3rd, 1871, the bill passed both houses and was signed by the President. The telegraph had been extended to our place (San Diego) and the news came over the wires. Of course, we were jubilant! We could almost hear the locomotive whistle. The following year in 1872 Tom Scott came here, and he was given a very warm welcome. A mass meeting was held and plans made for the future and everything seemed very bright and promising. We felt that San Diego's prosperity was assured. The following year ground was broken for the road, and the roadbed graded for a short distance. But alas, the money panic in New York stopped all further progress and we fell back into the old groove, and had to start again to build a railroad.

In the meantime, a local company had been organized to build a railroad to San Bernardino. Ground was broken in 1872 and about ten miles of roadbed graded. For some reason it was never finished.

From now on we improved slowly, and although we missed the railroad, we never lost faith. Then came the time when the Santa Fe built into the city, and although it was not what we hoped to have - a direct line to the East, yet it gave us some way of communicating with the outside world.

Then came the boom in 1886, with its influx of people and excitement. Improvements were now rapid, and San Diego commenced to take on its present aspect.

Editor's Note: Augusta Barrett was San Diego's second "school marm" at the Old School House in Old Town. A few months after arriving in San Diego, she married Captain Matthew Sherman, and moved with him to New San Diego, where he was Collector of Customs, stationed at the Barracks. In June, 1867, only a month after Alonzo E. Horton purchased Horton's Addition, Sherman bought 160 acres adjoining Horton's on the east. This became known as Sherman's Addition, and is bounded by 15th, 24th, Market and Commercial.

The Sherman's first home, at 19th and J, still stands, altered and changed in appearance, at 418-22 19th Street. Their last home was at 22nd and Market, also stillstanding, but remodeled as the Sherman Apartments. The Sherman School at 22nd and Island is named for Captain Sherman, who donated land and money for the first school in New San Diego. Captain Sherman was a member of the Board of Supervisors, 1885-1886, and was Mayor of San Diego, 1891-92.

These memoirs were dictated by Augusta Barrett Sherman to her son, Matthew Barrett Sherman, in 1890, and provide a graphic eyewitness account of the beginning of New San Diego. The memoirs were recently given to the San Diego Historical Society by Mrs. Sherman's granddaughter, Miss Frances A. Sloane, a member of the Society.

Matthew Sherman, Founding Father of San Diego

Condensed from the original by

Deborah Williams (DWilli1062@aol.com)

In the 1860's, Captain Matthew Sherman was one of the pioneer land developers and civic leaders of San Diego, California. Sherman seems to have been a modest man; characterized by a sense of balance and restraint that was reflected in his civic life, his financial activities, and his handsome home.

Matthew was born in Charleston, Massachusetts on 11 October 1827. He enlisted in the Navy at the age of thirteen and served on the U.S.S. Columbus and later on the U.S.S. Independence. He first came to California in 1847, when the Independence landed briefly at Monterey during the Mexican War. He returned sometime in the next decade as a civilian.

During the Civil War, Sherman served as Lieutenant and later Captain of the 4th Infantry Regiment of the California Volunteers. In 1862, he was stationed in San Diego, and liked it so well that after his discharge from the Army on 30 November 1865, he came back to settle permanently. Upon his arrival, Captain Sherman became the Customs Collector, a position he held for the next four years.

On 10 May 1867, Matthew Sherman married Augusta Jane Barrett another transplanted New Englander. She was born on 17 April 1839, in East Sumner, Maine on a farm that had belonged to her family since the Revolutionary War. As a child she dreamed of going to California to teach school. After realizing that dream and teaching for a year or two in San Francisco, Augusta found herself drawn to the San Diego area where she met and married Matthew Sherman.

After their marriage, Matthew bought from the City Trustees a 160-acre plot of land for 50 cents an acre. Sherman's Addition (or Sherman Heights as it was called because of its elevation) overlooked the flat lands of what is now downtown San Diego. He and Augusta were the only inhabitants until the fall of 1867 when another couple moved into the area. Their first home consisted of a small house and the "Barracks." The Barracks had been framed in the state of Maine and were brought around Cape Horn on a ship and were put up about 1852. In the spring of 1868, Matthew and Augusta built a small house and had moved into it by May.

The house is still standing at the northwest corner of 19th and I Streets according to the San Diego Historical Society.

After moving to this section of San Diego, Sherman was determined to make it a livable place. Many regarded him as a "crazy darned fool" because he wanted to sink a well, put up a windmill, and raise vegetables and sheep on his land. The prevailing idea at the time was that there was no water to be had in this part of San Diego. But, during the Civil War the soldiers had dug a well and found water at a depth of about 24 feet. Within a few years others had followed his example, sinking deep wells from which they obtained good water for their gardens.

Sherman subdivided his land in 1869 and soon recouped his initial investment as he sold off lots. In fact, land was selling so quickly in San Diego that the City Trustees (of which Sherman was by this time a member) decided that it was imperative that some of the land be set aside for public purposes before it was too late. In October 1869, the City Trustees arranged for the dedication of a 1400 acre City Park and a 200-acre cemetery; it was Mrs. Sherman who selected the name, Mount Hope, for the cemetery. In addition, the Sherman's donated land for one of the first schools and later gave more land for a more substantial building.

One of Sherman's greatest hopes, one he shared with many other San Diego residents, was to bring a direct transcontinental rail link to San Diego. As early as 1869, Sherman began his efforts by establishing a committee to solicit gifts of land and to entice the Memphis and El Paso railroad to locate its terminus in San Diego. That project did not materialize. However, the following year Sherman and others organized the San Diego and Los Angeles railroad. It was a paper corporation with a land grant from the City Trustees, which they hoped would lure a transcontinental railroad.

In 1871, Sherman went to Washington to lobby for passage of legislation chartering the Texas and Pacific to build a rail line from Texas to California. While in Washington, Congressman John A. Logan worked out the final details of the bill that provided Federal government land grants and subsidies. After passage of the Texas and Pacific bill in 1871, Tom Scott, president of the railroad came to California where city officials and business leaders from San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego entertained him. He finally agreed to establish the terminus of the Texas and Pacific in San Diego in exchange for title to other railroad corporations such as the San Diego and Los Angeles.

The following year ground was broken for the road, and the roadbed graded for a short distance. But, the Texas and Pacific never completed the rail line as the company was ruined by the stock market crash of 1873. San Diego went into hibernation for the next decade and Matthew Sherman retired to his farm in the El Cajon valley to raise zinfandel grapes.

In 1885, the recently organized California Southern railroad made connections with the Santa Fe, running a line from San Diego to San Bernardino. At last, San Diego had the transcontinental connection. The population tripled and land sales boomed. Sherman came out of his semi-retirement, sold his El Cajon farm and vineyard, and had plans drawn up for a large new home in Sherman Heights.

The new home was a two-story, 11-room structure. It was described as "finely furnished" and cost $15,000. Since this was several times what the average residence cost in those days, Sherman and his family (including daughter Fannie 1872-1911 and son, Matthew 1878-?) had a handsome and comfortable home that was characterized by an air of dignified simplicity and classical balance.

After the collapse of the building boom of the 1880's, San Diego settled down for another period of slumber. Sherman however continued to play an active role in San Diego's civic life, serving as Mayor from 1891-92.

One of the most colorful events during his term of office was the first celebration in honor of Cabrillo's landing at San Diego. The 350th anniversary of that occasion was marked by a dramatic re-enactment of the event. Manuel Cabral, a fisherman from La Playa who portrayed Cabrillo, was attired in a costume that included velvet knee breeches and an ostrich-feather hat. His ship was to land at one of the town's piers, but because of delays, it did not arrive until the tide had gone out. As a result, the ship became stuck on a shoal some distance away. In the meantime, the excited crowd gathered onto the wharf and in the throng, the handrail broke causing many of the frock-coated officials, including Mayor Sherman, to spill into the mud. Fortunately, the remainder of the celebration was more successful.

Matthew Sherman died on 5 July 1898. Praised as one of San Diego's earliest residents, he was described as a man of strong character, yet "gentle in manner and approachable...He was a man who had many friends and few enemies." His wife, Augusta, died in 1913 and was buried beside him in Mount Hope Cemetery whose name and location owed so much to the Shermans.

HISTORY OF UMATILLA & MORROW COUNTIES, OREGON - 1914 - Page 408

C. A. BARRETT

Among the representative business men and as one of the leading citizens of Umatilla County stands the man whose name initiates this paragraph and whose life of excellent achievement in the commercial realms of eastern Oregon has been worthy of emulation, while his unsullied reputation and intrinsic moral worth are quite commensurate therewith, having displayed characteristic uprightness and maintained a high honor throughout his long career in this county.

He was born in Oxford County, Maine, on June 21, 1852, to J. S. and Elizabeth M. Barrows, natives also of the Pine Tree state. His educational training was received in his native place except two years of service in the shoe shops of Massachusetts, following which, in 1872, he crossed the plains to California, then came to Weston, Umatilla County. Here he engaged for wages with John Adams in wool growing, and the horse business, continuing there until he acquired sufficient funds to embark in the same business for himself.

In the spring of 1883 he sold his sheep, retaining his horse business, and took up the hardware and implement business, and to the successful prosecution of this he has devoted himself continuously since, having at the present time a large and lucrative patronage, which is fully merited by his careful business methods and watchfulness for the interests of his customers and strict honesty in all his dealings.

In addition to his handsome Athena property he has 2,000 acres of land, half pasture and timber land and the balance farmed to wheat. He is also one of the incorporators of the First National Bank of Athena, in which town his business is carried on, and on the organization of this bank he was elected its first president, and held that office two terms and is at the present time director of the same.

He was one of the incorporators of the Athena Flouring Mill Company and has been either president or vice-president of the company since its inception, and is now one of the directors. Twice have the people called him to act as chief executive of his home city, and he has frequently served as councilman, ever bringing to bear the same wisdom and faithfulness that are characteristic of him in all his private operations.

He has also freely given his time and talent to the advancement of the interests of the schools of the town by acting as director. Fraternally he is associated with the W. of W., the K. of P. and the K.O.T.M.

November, 1877 the marriage of Mr. Barrett and Miss Jennie E. Mays was solemnized and to them have been born two children, Areta and Henry A., the latter being in the store with his father and holding the position of secretary of the company. Mr. Barrett is one of the most substantial business men of the entire section and has so demeaned himself that he has won and retains the confidence and esteem of the entire community.

Excerpts from the Valley Herald, May 28, 1993, by Helen Woodroffe.

He grandparents, Charles and Jennie Barrett, were married in Weston. They moved to Athena in 1877 and the family has been there ever since. Charles Barrett was a farmer and sheep man who also owned a hardware store in Athena, and he served in the Oregon Legislature for several years. Jennie Barrett was a founding member of the Athena Baptist Church in 1890 and she attended the first Pioneer Reunion in 1892, and in the early years sat on the platform at the Weston Picnic with other pioneers.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

CHARLES A. BARRETT. - There is no good reason why the people of Oregon should not be as state. They are a selection from the residents of communities from all parts of American, and even from Europe, possessing the culture and intelligence of their native regions with the super-added experience of Western life. And we think that the work of settlement and development done by our people would be no discredit to any in the world.

Mr. Barrett is from Maine, where he was born in 1852. After a few years in Massachusetts and also on the Pacific coast in California, he arrived in Umatilla county, Oregon, in 1872, - a young man full of courage and vigor. His life for six years was on Wild Horse creek in the employment of Mr. J.F. Adams. While there he helped drive overland to Cheyenne one of those bands of cattle which were so numerous in Oregon at that time. In 1880 he came to Centerville, and undertook the raising of sheep and the rearing of horses, retaining his sheep interest until quite recently. In 1883 he added to his other occupations the hardware and implement store of Kasson Smith, and is still operating in this line. His real estate is quite considerable, -farm of 160 acres near Weston; two hundred acres on Pine creek, ten miles north of Centerville; ad four residence and two business lots on Main street in Centerville. On one of these residence lots he has a dwelling-house costing five thousand dollars. This is one of the best in the county. The fire-proof brick building twenty-five by seventy feet in which he does business also belongs to him. This makes a thrifty showing for eight years' residence in the town.

Mrs. Barrett was formerly to Mr. Barrett occurred in Weston. Her marriage to Mr. Barrett occurred in 1877. They have two children, Arcta, the elder, and a boy, Henry.

One of the solid men financially, the man whose portrait looks from the opposite page is no less a substantial pillar of society in every interest calculated to benefit the community.

Nonagenarian Recalls Early Days in Athena

By Maxine Elder

ATHENA -- Local history and "Auntie B." are synonymous in Athena.

The affinity for family and friends, both old and young, has kept her alert to current events and happenings of a year ago, 50 years or 70 years, to say nothing of stories told or recorded by her mother of prior events. And her collection of photographs is outstanding.

"Auntie B." is Miss Areta Barrett who celebrated her 90th birthday July 24 and was honored at an open house Sunday hosted by her nieces, Mrs Robin (Helen) Woodroffe, Mrs Leonard (Genevieve) Geissel, and Mrs. J. H. (Beverly) Tillman Jr.

The party was in the Fireside Room of First Baptist Church -- the church where her mother, the late Jennie Mays Barrett, was a charter member and where she has been a member since she was 14.

Miss Barrett was born at Weston but her father, Charles A Barrett, moved his family to Athena in 1890. Areta and her brother, the late Henry A Barrett, attended Athena school. She was a member of the first graduating class-- six girls and one boy -- in 1897.

Attended Normal

Areta and Henry went to the Normal School at Weston, commuting by horse and cart. She laughingly recalled the day he dashed late to class in his overalls; he'd taken too long at the livery stable where he left the horse each day. Usually they took a bale of hay along for horse feed and a shovel was standard equipment during the winter months. Snow drifted into the hollow, present site of the vining station on the Athena-Weston highway.

After normal school she attended McMinnville College(later Linfield) where her mother had been one of the first students. It was a long journey -- by boat from Umatilla Landing to Portland, then on to McMinnville when Mrs. Barrett enrolled in 1875. By the time Areta matriculated there was rail transportation to the Willamette Valley.

After college Miss Barrett returned to the normal school at Weston where she substituted as voice teacher for a time. She was active in alumni affairs which included a reunion annually during the community's Pioneer Picnic. Final gathering was some six years ago.

Taught Piano

Miss Barrett taught piano for 20 years in Athena and greeted many of her former pupils at the Sunday party.

In her younger days she shared, with her brother, a love for horses and competed in races, mostly short distance events, she recalls. Her trophies included a silver cup, many ribbons and an Indian blanket.

Miss Barrett's home, where she has lived since 1937, is furnished with handsom antiques.

A "whatnot" shelf is one of the few pieces of furniture her parents had when they set up housekeeping. Wall shelves hold her collection of commemorative plates.

Her interest in history was probably inherited from her mother who kept a detailed journal and also had traced the family history back to the 1600s. A staunch Republican, she had been aghast to find that "Old Grover Cleveland," a Democratic president, was a relative!

Miss Barrett not only has a great store of family history, but many of third and fourth generation families have come to her seeking links in their past. Her recall of names, places and events is phenomenal.

Many Sent Greetings

She has long been a board member of the Athena Cemetery district and lamented that many early markers were destroyed thoughtlessly by some who were not concerned with records.

Birthday messages from throughout the Untied States, South America and Europe brought greetings to her. nearly 300 attended the open house, including out-of-towners Dr and Mrs P. G. Sigis, Portland, and Gen. Robert L. Scott Jr., Phoenix, Ariz. She had not seen Dr. Sigis since 1917.

Grandnephews Barrett, John and Andrew Tillman and grandniece Sally Geissel assisted with the guest book. Special greetings came from her other grandnephew, Dr. Michael Woodroofe, Ann Arbor, Mich. Assisting about the rooms were Mrs Dean Pinkerton, Mrs. John Adams, Mrs James Rice, Gretchen Geissel, Milton-Freewater; Alison Duncan, Melyn Schmidtgall, Alison Hansell, Jimmie Rice, Johnny Adams, and women of the Baptist Mission Soiety.

J. F. ADAMS

A leading sheep and horse raiser of Umatilla county, lives in the edge of the Blue mountains near the Umatilla reservation. His parents were Joseph and Areete Adams, of Franklin county, Maine. He was born in the town of Jay, Maine, July 20, 1835, and has seven brothers and sisters, Charles B., Henry C., Joseph W., Helen M., Mercy H., Adda B., and Bertha. His boyhood days were spent in the quiet of New England farm life, attending the public school at intervals, and dividing two of the later years between attendance at an academy and working on the farm. In 1858 he resolved to make a bold stroke to better his condition.

He therefore, came to this coast by the Panama rout, and made his way to Umpqua valley, Oregon, where he began life as a school teacher. He taught four years, investing his earnings in live stock, thus laying the foundation of his fortune.

He then devoted himself to the stock business. In 1865 he came to Umatilla county and located his present home, containing 250 acres, which forms one of the illustrations of this work. J. F. Adams, Robert Thompson and Jacob Frazier were the pioneers in that section of the county. Mr. Adams confined his attention to sheep until 1870, when he began raising horses also. His bands of sheep contain from 6,000 to 10,000, and his horses graze on the hills in large numbers. In 1868 he married Miss Susan F. Fry, a lady from Indianapolis, Ind. Their children are: John R., born January 15, 1880; George H., July 27, 1881.

Having lived so long on the frontier, Mr. Adams has had many adventures and experience incident to such a life, including a narrow escape from the hostile Bannocks, when they came upon the reservation in 1878 and murdered several people. He possesses in a marked degree the qualities of energy and activity required to conduct his business successfully, and is reconed among the most enterprising citizens of Umatilla County.

As Kathleen McEwen, she was the daughter of Mrs. Andrew B McEwen, now living in Portland, and the late A. B. McEwen, pioneers who early settled farming land in Umatilla County. She was born Nov. 11, 1888, on their farm near Athena.

September 13, 1912, she was married to Henry A Barrett, who survives.

Mrs Barrett had spent nearly all the past 30 years in the Athena postoffice, first as assistant and since 1937 as postmaster. She belonged to the Presbyterian Church at Pendleton, was a charter member of McKenzie Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, and was active in civic and social work of the community.

The new McEwen High School of Athena was erected on land donated by her mother from the original McEwen farm.

Besides her husband and mother, Mrs. Barrett leaves three daughters, Mrs Robin (Helen) Woodrooffe, Mrs Leonard (Genevieve) Geissel and Mrs Jack (Beverly) Tillman, all of Athena; a brother, Ralph McEwen of Haines, Ore.; two sisters, Mrs William (Jessica) Jenkins of Riverside, Calif., and Mrs. Dallas (Thelma) Smith of Portland; and five grandchildren.

'Leonard Gas Station' finally gets vacation

ATHENA – Leonard Geissel was the official bicycle repairman for at least three generations of Athena's youngsters.

He could always be counted on to fix a flat bike tire or repair a broken bike.

And these services were offered by Geissel for free.

Last week, he ended that career when he locked the doors of the Athena Service Station for the last time.

Geissel, 68, retired after doing business on the corner of Fourth Avenue and Main Street for more than 37 years.

In addition to his avocation of repairing bicycles, Geissel, over the years, became the semiofficial crossing guard for many children on their way home from school.

Nearly every day, he could be seen taking time out from his business to help a kindergartener make it across Main Street.

He also acted as an arbitrator on many occasions for the area's youngsters, and his telephone was always available just for the asking.

Geissel, Athena's recipient of this year's Man of the Year award, could always be counted on to buy raffle tickets or candy from area children.

Two year's ago, a group of third-graders made Geissel birthday cards with "I love you" written on them.

One said, "Happy Birthday Leonard Gas Station".

On Geissel's last day in business, he arrived at the station to find that the outside walls had been papered with drawings and notes from the children.

There was also a big sign which said, "Thanks for the Helping Hand"

In addition to the town's children, Geissel is well liked by everyone he comes in contact with, according to his friends.

"He's the only man in the world I know of who doesn't have an enemy," says Athena lawyer Don Duncan.

His station became the unofficial meeting place for many of the area's citizens, according to Duncan.

Geissel would always have a fresh supply of peanuts available on any day.

Farmers, lawyers, insurance men, hunters or fishermen could be seen with Geissel huddled around the station's pot-bellied stove, hulling peanuts and exchanging commentary on the day's current events, Duncan says.

"The whole town's going to miss him," the lawyer says.

Geissel moved to Athena with his family 62 years ago.

Fifty of those years were spent working on Main Street. First at the drug store, then at the bank and finally the service station business.

Giessel says the only thing he is sure of about his retirement is that he won't have to get up each morning and come down to the station to open it up.

He says he might take a vacation because he hasn't had one in 14 years.

In declining health for several years, Tillman was cared for by family members in her home until she moved to care facilities in Walla Walla lastsummer and in Bend this spring.

She is survived by her husband, of Athena; and three sons and a daughter-in-law, Barrett Tillman of Mesa, Arizona, John Tillman of Athena and Andy and Cheryl Tillman of Bend. She was preceded in death by two sisters, Genevieve Geissel in 1980, and Helen Woodroffe in 1994.

Obituary | Charles Herring anchored Seattle's first live TV news

By Tan Vinh

Seattle Times staff reporter

(Picture)

Charles Herring is seen on the set of KING-TV News in 1962. The first live broadcast aired on the station on Sept. 10, 1951.

On an early September evening in 1951, Charles H. Herring Jr. stepped in front of a camera and into history, becoming Seattle's first live-television news broadcaster.

He changed the landscape of this radio- and newspaper-dependent city, colleagues and historians said. He brought Seattle breaking news and live coverage of historic events. He became part of the family dinner-hour ritual.

Mr. Herring died Monday at Swedish Medical Center after a long bout with cancer. He was 83.

Mr. Herring, who worked at Channel 5 for 16 years, was the first live-news anchor north of Los Angeles and west of Minneapolis, said Feliks Banel, a news historian for Seattle's Museum of History & Industry (MOHAI).

His coverage of the 1962 Seattle's World's Fair was the nation's first live broadcast via satellite to Europe, according to KING-TV News.

Through Mr. Herring, a riveted public had a front-row seat for the historic test flight of the Boeing 707 prototype in 1954, the riot in the state penitentiary at Walla Walla in 1955 and the McClellan Committee hearing into the affairs of the controversial Teamsters union leader Dave Beck in Washington, D.C.

With his authoritative voice and dapper suits, Mr. Herring projected a sense of confidence during the nightly 15-minute broadcast.

The first live broadcast aired on Sept. 10, 1951, MOHAI said, and among his top stories, according to a Seattle Times article, was a forest fire that spread across thousands of acres in Forks, Clallam County.

"In the early 1950s, KING-TV was the only television station on the air. Anyone with a television set got the news from Charles Herring," Banel said.

Born on Aug. 18, 1922, Mr. Herring was raised on a farm outside of Walla Walla. He enrolled at Washington State University for a year, then transferred to Whitman College, where the English major graduated cum laude in 1944.

The U.S. Navy sent Mr. Herring to fight in the Pacific. When he returned two years later, he took a newscasting job at a Seattle radio station before becoming Channel 5's first news director and anchor in 1951.

A former mom-and-pop store on Queen Anne Hill that had an uneven floor served as his newsroom. "His desk was propped up with something so that his pencils wouldn't roll off onto the floor as he was trying to edit his news script," Banel said.

He would type his script — he was the fastest two-finger typist you will ever see, his family said — then hop into his car to the studio in South Lake Union, sometimes arriving minutes before airtime.

Every day was a race to the studio because he was chasing news, said his son, Charlie Herring of Seattle.

By the time his son was in middle school, he realized his father was a big deal because at restaurants, diners would always stop Mr. Herring to get his autograph.

Mr. Herring, who once read the news on air with a smoking pipe in his hand, left Channel 5 in 1967, and with his wife, the late Mary Bemus, purchased KAPY-AM in Port Angeles. The couple ran the radio station until 1978. He then worked for Boeing as a video producer until retiring in 1987.

He lived on Glen Acres Golf course in Seattle, near the first hole, for about the past 20 years.

Besides his son, Mr. Herring is survived by his brother, Jerry Herring, of Sonora, Calif.; a sister, Carlee Lorenz, of Rolling Hills, Calif.; daughters Mary Susan Pitlick of Seattle, Pam Beil of Fox Island and Jenny Herring of Edmonds; and six grandchildren.

At his request, no services will be held. Remembrances may be made in his name to Whitman College, 345 Boyer Ave., Walla Walla, WA 99362, Providence Mount St. Vincent, 4831 35th Ave S.W., Seattle, WA 98126-2799 or the Union Gospel Mission, 3800 S. Othello St., Seattle, WA 98118.

Children of MARY BEMUS and CHARLES HERRING are:

- i. MARY SUSAN⁷ HERRING.
- ii. CHARLES HOWARD HERRING.
- iii. PAM HERRING.
