Rock Hill School

Now desolate and deserted, the old Rock Hill School building stands alone. Once brimming with life, the schoolhouse is now a mere shell of its past self. Rock Hill School for many years was a school, church, and all around gathering place for the community. In short, it was the main center of community activity for the surrounding areas.

Even though Rock Hill School has been closed for about 60 years, memories of the past students live on. Rock Hill School was founded by William Gallaher in 1854. William Gallaher was the first teacher, and the original school was built on one of his land claims. The site of the original building and the present building are much the same. The school is located about four and one-half miles to the south of Lebanon on Rock Hill Drive.

The present school building was constructed between 1895 and 1905, but there were four other buildings before. The first building was constructed in 1853 as a log cabin, and the students sat on slab benches without backs. It was destroyed by a fire, probably in the late 1860's. The second school house was an old church building where camp meetings had been held. The third building was intended to be a church building, and was constructed by the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. They ran out of funds part way through building and joined forces with the school committee to complete the building. Not much is known about why that building was no longer used, or much about the fourth building. The final and presently standing building was probably built about 1895-1905. No one is quite sure about the reasons for construction or the architect. The school was originally painted white with black trim.

In a typical Rock Hill School class there were about twenty students a year, and all eight grades were in one room. It was, after all, a one room school house. The class was like one large family, and the older students pitched in to help with the younger students with their assignments. This allowed the teacher more time to help with the other students. A normal school day started at 9:30 a.m. with the students lining up at the door, and then marching into the class room. The students started the day by saluting the flag and singing a song. The teacher or an older student would accompany them on an old pump organ. A recess at about 10:45 a.m. gave the students their first opportunity of the day to use the outhouses.

VAlta Wilson Ballew, a former student of Rock Hill School, remembers Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Halloween programs and parties that were held in the school. She recalls that students would write poetry and perform plays. Parents and community members would come to watch, and a fun time would be had by all.

The community worked together to take care of the needs of the teacher. For example, the teacher boarded with a family, and each family paid a "subscription rate" for each child in their family attending school. On some cold winter mornings, men from the community would go to school early to start a fire in the stove so the teacher would arrive to a warm, cozy school building. The school, although old, is by no means forgotten. It is remembered by more people than just past students, and there is a lot of work being done to restore the school building. The efforts are being headed by the Rock Hill Historical Society, and after completion it is hoped that others can come visit the restored building.

Notes for JOSEPH M GALLAHER:

An illustrated history of Spokane County, state of Washington, W.H. Lever, Publisher 1900, page 346-347

Joseph M Gallaher, farmer, was born in Putnam county, Illinois, August 19, 1833. He was early taken by his parents to Iowa, and there he lived until 1845. then removed with them to the Willamette valley, Oregon, where he received his education.

Subsequently he engaged in farming, and followed that occupation there for nineteen years, then in Douglas county, Oregon, for three years. He resided in Umatilla county for the ensuing fourteen years, during four of which he held the office of justice of the peace. He then spent about nine years as a farmer in Walla Walla county, subsequently coming to Whitman county, where he tried the hotel business for a year. His next move was to the vicinity of Rockford, and he has lived there continuously since, engaged for some years past in stock raising. In addition to his other work, Mr. Gallaher has performed his duties as a minister of the Gospel for more than half a century. He began preaching for the Methodists in southern Oregon, and continued his ministry in that denomination until his arrival in Spokane county. He was the first Methodist pastor north of The Dalles, Oregon, preaching the first Methodist sermon ever heard in that part of the country. Since coming to Rockford he has preached for the United Brethren. In 1849 and the few years following he had many exciting skirmishes with the Indians and not a few adventures of a precarious character. He was married in Linn county, Oregon, August 9, 1857, to Mary A. Kees, a native of Missouri, who crossed the plains with her parents at an early date. They have a family of six children living, namely: Joseph E., Oscar S., Amy Z., Lucy J., Nellie A. and Irvin A.
